

Titan bets on tech to keep up with the times

With an expanded portfolio of smartwatches, the Tata group company is hoping to revive the watch business

ANTARA BAGU, 1 December
Watches and jewellery maker Titan Company will soon launch smartwatches under its Sonata and Fastrack labels among others, aimed at young consumers...

looking great. Interestingly for the few thousand units that were produced got sold out within a couple of months...

One reason is that the big smartwatch makers have thus far focused on a homogeneous experience for all buyers...

"If growth is not going to come at the pace it used to earlier, we are looking at how to be more efficient and productive"

Titan brought out its first smartwatch in January called Juxta in the premium category, priced in the ₹15,000-20,000 range...

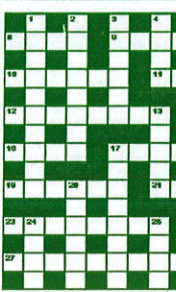

The Indian smartwatch market is a mere fraction of global markets. And though most companies believe that there is immense potential for the product here...

ment that has been dominated by technology majors such as Apple, Samsung and Lenovo among others. In recent years many traditional watch makers have joined the bandwagon...

Titan is adopting a slew of measures to reduce the growth and is also experimenting with design. Kant added that the company will raise the standards of presentation of the brand across the 8,000 dealers...

All these measures, the company believes, will help combat challenging market conditions. Across the world, the traditional watch market is on a downward spiral...
